EASTER SUNDAY DEATH TOLL IN STATE IS ELEVEN

Snow Flurries and Raw Wind Fail To Keep Most Motorists at Home

TWO DIE IN COLUMBUS

Man Who Was Hurt Placing Warning Sign Also Succumbs

By International News Service

Fitful snow flurries and a raw, March-like wind, experienced in most sections of the state, Easter Sunday, failed to keep Ohio motorists indoors and as a result traffic accidents assumed mid-summer figures over the week-end. A check-up today showed 11 dead.

Columbus—Mrs. Jennie Paugle, 40, was killed when hit by an auto as she was crossing a street Sunday morning. The driver was not at fault, according to police. Mrs. Bertha Hahn, 51, died from a fractured skull sustained when she was struck by an auto.

Cincinnati—William Finneran, 20, of Dayton, was killed and Raphael Moak, 21, was injured when hit by an automobile said to have been driven by William Bader, 23, near Cheviot. Finneran and Moak were changing a tire. Bader was arrested and released under $1,000 bond.

Zanesville — Andrew J. Bell, 65, Hopewell, died Sunday of injuries sustained when he was hit by an automobile Friday. An employe of the State Highway Department, Bell was placing a sign on the road, warning motorists that men were at work in that section, when he was run down.

Chrichsville—William Vanderbile, 50, died in a hospital last night after a collision between his and another automobile at Roanoke, near here.

Toledo—James E. Wells, 50, Detroit, died in a hospital yesterday after he had been run down by a "hit-skip" driver on a road near here.

Dover—Lester Kerns, 36, New Philadelphia taxi driver, died here of a fractured skull which he received last week when his cab skidded into a pole.

DEPUTY G. W. DEAL IN RACE FOR SHERIFF

Announces Candidacy for Republican Nomination; Is Third Entry

George W. Deal, deputy sheriff, announced today that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff in the August primary. He is the third Republican to enter the race.

Deal is a lifelong resident of Marion County and is expected to be a strong contender for the Republican nomination. He has served as deputy under his brother, Sheriff James A. Deal, since about a year ago, when he was appointed to succeed Deputy W. D. Hazen following Hazen's resignation to become a Federal law enforcement officer.

Prior to taking up his work in the sheriff's office, Deal resided in Montgomery Township, where he was engaged in farming. He is a son of Harrison Deal, one of the old residents of Montgomery Township.

Deal is 47 years of age, married, and resides at 131 S. Grand-av.

Other Republicans who have announced their candidacy for the office are John J. Francis, Marion Township, former sheriff, and John Iden, Caledonia farmer and stock buyer.

LOT OF FUNERALS

Not Much Business in House Tuesday; Baseball Season Opens

Washington, April 9—Congress will be in session tomorrow but it's a safe bet that the fate of the nation won't hinge upon its decisions.

The official program of the House for the week, as outlined by Republican leaders in letters to members, contained this:

"Tuesday—undetermined. (Opening of baseball season.)

"There'll be a liberal congressional representation at Griffith Stadium when the Nationals and the Boston Red Sox play the opener."

OFF TO 'FRISCO

Los Angeles, April 9—The New York American's giant plane "Toledo Leadership," which has successfully negotiated a tour across the country, was to hop off today for San Francisco. The fliers plan to start east again tomorrow by way of Reno and Denver.

AL READY FOR TRIP

New York, April 9—Al Smith was making preparations today for his vacation trip to Asheville, N. C. Accompanied by Mrs. Smith and members of his family, the governor arrived here at midnight.

KIDDIES ROLL EGGS

Tramps Over White House Grounds for Annual Fete

WASHINGTON, April 9—Washington's youngsters took possession of the White House today for their annual Easter Monday egg rolling.

The only grownups allowed inside the gates were those accompanying children too young to be left alone. Thousands of children participated.

At 3:30 o'clock the grounds were to be thrown open to the public for a concert by the Marine Band. President Coolidge planned to appear.

SINCLAIR ON TRIAL AGAIN IN OIL CONSPIRACY

Magnate Surrounded by His "Million-Dollar" Array of Counsel

Washington, April 9 — The federal government launched its supreme effort today to bring Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil man and sportsman, to task for his participation in the so-called Teapot Dome oil scandals.

Shortly after 10 o'clock this morning Sinclair went on trial for criminal conspiracy to defraud the nation of the Teapot Dome Naval Oil Reserve in the court of District Supreme Court Justice Jennings Bailey.

The first 26 of the 550 men and women available for jury duty were on hand in the tiny courtroom for questioning. George Hoover of defense counsel immediately challenged the court's practice of personally questioning the veniremen to the exclusion of the opposing attorneys, claiming it contrary to all existing law and unfair to his famous client.

Listens to Argument

Sinclair listened to the argument in a nonchalant manner, surrounded by his "million-dollar" array of counsel. His co-defendant, Former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall, who leased him the disputed oil land in exchange for what the government contends was a $230,500 bribe was missing today—too ill in New Mexico to attempt the journey to Washington.

Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, the government's special oil prosecutors, upheld the court's practice of personally interrogating the prospective jurors. It

CHICAGO POLITICS NEAR WHITE HEAT

Candidates Hurl Their Verbal Bombs at Unnerved Citizenry

Chicago, April 9—A black-powder bomb was exploded today in the rear of a two-story brick building in Melrose Park, a suburb. The bombed building was only three blocks from the Melrose Park Police Station. Police threw a veil of secrecy about the blast.

* * *

Chicago, April 9—With tension near the breaking point, rival candidates in Chicago's bitterest of all election campaigns today hurled their final verbal bombs over the heads of a nerve-strained citizenry.

The warring Republican factions are headed by United States Senator Charles S. Deneen, Louis L. Emmerson and Judge John A. Swanson on one side, and by Gov. Len Small, Mayor William Hale Thompson and State Attorney Crowe on the other.

The principal fight rages around the nomination for governor and for state's attorney of Cook County (Chicago.) Senator Deneen and Mayor Thompson, field marshals for their respective forces, are not up for any office at this time, but their political fortunes depend on the success of their respective candidates.

Len Small, incumbent, is seeking the nomination to succeed himself as governor. He is opposed by Louis L. Emmerson of the Deneen camp. Robert E. Crowe, who seeks to succeed himself as state's attorney of Cook County, is opposed by Judge Swanson.

The Small-Thompson-Crowe faction has campaigned under the slogan of "America First," which has become a target for the Deneen forces. Deneen campaigners ask at every rally what "America First" has to do with enforcing the laws in Chicago and the reputation the city holds throughout the world.

POSTMASTER DIES

East Liverpool, April 9 — Acting Postmaster Charles Brown, 57, Republican, died here today after a long illness. He had served one term as mayor and four as councilmen. His widow survives.

Easter Snow Storm Forces Marion Residents to Give up Plans For Colorful Parade

Tan, Blue and Purple Attire Kept in Storage as Weatherman Spoils Fashion Program; Gale One of Worst in Months

THE parade of the light tans, the light blues, the light greens, the light purples (especially garters) turned out to be a parade of the old blue overcoats and last winter's furs as one of the worst snow storms of the year in the city, put a damper on the long looked for Easter parade.

Disappointment to Beau Brummels was eased somewhat when prospects for a clear day yesterday began to fade early Saturday. With overcast skies Saturday, Easter togs were left in their boxes and in a few cases last year's Easter suits were left at the dry cleaners.

About noon Saturday slight hope was revived when clouds cleared away momentarily. Shoe stores of the city report last-minute rushes.

Comes from West

The snow storm hit the city from the west and after lingering during the day passed on to the east. Motorists driving into the city from the north, south and east reported difficulty in driving at times the road, at a distance greater than 10 to 15 feet in front of cars, was totally obscured from view by the swirling snow.

According to reports this morning the ground was green six times yesterday and five times whites. The snow, although heavy at times, failed to stick. While the skies were entirely obscured from the view here during the most of last night, motorists driving from the west report that weather there was clear and that stars were clearly visible in the sky.

Warmer Weather Promised

Rising temperature is promised in the official forecast for Tuesday. Tonight is to be fair with Tuesday partly cloudy.

The mercury here yesterday failed to get above 38 degrees. The low was 25. A year ago the high temperature recorded was 54 while the low was 33.

CHAMBERLIN DATE IS CHANGED HERE

Flier To Visit Marion on May 15 Instead of May 9, Committee Announces

Clarence D. Chamberlin, noted aviator who has included Marion as one of the stops on his country-wide tour, will be here on May 15, instead of May 9, it was announced today.

The change is necessary because of the arrangements having previously been made for holding the high school May festival on May 9, the committee planning for Chamberlain's visit reported.

The announcement was made today by Charles Whysall, chairman of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce committee sponsoring the event.

Other details of the program outlined in the first announcement, published Saturday, are unchanged, Whysall stated.

Chamberlain will arrive here about noon, May 15, coming by airplane from Cincinnati. Following an exhibition flight over the city he will give two talks at local schools. His visit will be concluded at night with an address illustrated with motion pictures, given at the Chautauqua Pavilion.

CROPS IN NORTHERN OHIO NOT DAMAGED

Fruit Crop in Southern Section of State Believed Hurt by Cold

Columbus, April 9—While the sub freezing weather of the Easter week-end is expected to have had no ill effects on crops of any kind in northern Ohio agriculture, weather statisticians today reported that they believed early blossoming of fruit of southern Ohio would feel the effects of the sudden drop.

The crop of early cherries of Lawrence County, (Ironton), was reported to have been seriously damaged.

The coldest temperature of the state was reported this morning at Lima where the thermometer registered 24. In the western part of the state the temperature ranged from 26 at Toledo, to 25 at Napoleon, 26 at Sidney, 28 at Dayton, and 28 at Cincinnati.

At northern Ohio points the temperature reported this morning was generally about 26.

The truck and fruit crops of the eastern Ohio hills perhaps suffered not at all, as the temperature along the Ohio river about Marietta hovered near the freezing point. The temperature in central Ohio was 28.

Temperatures this morning were about one degree lower than yesterday morning.

COX DISMISSED,

But Must Answer to Charge of Driving While Intoxicated

New York, April 9—James M. Cox, Jr., son of the 1920 Democratic presidential nominee and a Yale student, today was dismissed in Yorkville Court on a charge of assault growing out of an automobile accident on March 23.

Cox was accused of having run over Peter Lorenzo, a laborer, with his automobile, but Magistrate Francis X. McQuade could find no criminal intent or negligence.

Cox still must appear in traffic court to answer charges of leaving the scene of an accident and driving while intoxicated.

Hope to Acquaint Ohioans With Beauties of State

COLUMBUS, April 9—Preliminary plans for perfecting a statewide organization designed to acquaint Ohioans and residents of other states with the scenic beauties of the Buckeye State and its historic, agricultural and industrial attractions were made at a conference in the Ohio Senate chamber here this morning of representatives of numerous state associations.

The meeting was called by Gov. Vic Donahey at the request of officials of various state organizations. Talks in support of the proposed organization were made by Director of Commerce Cyrus Locher, Jacob Mechatroth, secretary to Governor Donahey, Charles Mylander, Columbus, secretary, Ohio Bankers' Association, Reno G. Hoag, proprietor of Hotel Lafayette, Marietta, and others.

Recess was taken until this afternoon to permit a committee of 10, including Governor Donahey, to prepare suggestions for a permanent organization, including officers, constitution and by-laws.

SEEK SIX BANDITS

Marshal Walks into Hall as Holdup Is Occurring

Cincinnati, April 9—Six desperadoes who held up a pool room in North College Hill, a suburb of this city early yesterday, killed Peter Dumele, 50, the village marshal, and wounded two other men, were the objects of an extensive police search today.

The bandits, all masked, rushed into a pool hall, operated by Lee Staib, Sunday morning holding pistols and sawed-off shotguns and commanded Staib and about a dozen patrons of the place to throw up their hands. Staib, surprised, did not comply immediately and one of the robbers struck him with the butt of a pistol.

At this juncture, Marshal Dumele, unaware that a holdup was in progress, walked into the room. The leader of the band commanded him to put up his hands and get in line with the rest.

Reaches for Pistol

Instead the marshal reached for his pistol. A roar of two shotguns and a pistol, exploding simultaneously followed and Marshal Dumele dropped to the floor, fatally wounded. A panic resulted, one man jumped through a window and others dropped behind pool tables and other available shelter.

The bandits fled, one of them shooting back into the place with his shotgun. Part of the shot struck Samuel Keller in the back but he was not seriously hurt.

Marshal Dumele was rushed to a hospital where he died. He had been the town marshal for three years. Just before he died he told his wife, Eva, "I couldn't be a coward."

NOTED OHIO POET TO GIVE ADDRESS HERE

Edmund Vance Cooke Engaged To Speak at Rotary-Kiwanis Luncheon

Edmund Vance Cooke, Ohio's poet, it was announced by President Jesse Mason at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary club at the Hotel Harding today, will be the speaker at a joint luncheon of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs next Monday noon.

It will be the poet's first appearance in the city as a speaker, the president said, and he will take as his subject, "Laughter of Living."

The luncheon will be the second of two joint luncheons planned by the clubs for the year. The first was held in January, when the Rotarians were the guests of the Kiwanians.

Toledo Man Talks

Charles Hartman, of Toledo, former district governor, who took as the subject of his talk, "Rotarian's Responsibility to His Vocation," was the speaker at today's luncheon. The speaker stressed the duty of the Rotarian not to conduct his business purely for profit or personal gain, but with the thought of a service to his fellowman.

The duty of the Rotarian is one of responsibility to the community in which he lives, the speaker said, and he who conducts business purely for his own selfish gain has gone far from the mark of the purpose of Rotary, he said.

He was released on his own recognizance for his appearance in court this morning, when he waived examination and was held to the grand jury under $300 bond. Sharpless will be arraigned for trial in Common Pleas Court Wednesday on three indictments returned by the grand jury at a special session two weeks ago.

AUTO HITS CAR, TWO ARE DEAD

Five Others Injured in Accident at Toledo; Sisters May Die

Toledo, April 9 — Two men were killed and five other persons were injured when the automobile in which they were riding was hit by a Detroit, Monroe & Toledo Traction Car near the city limits shortly after midnight this morning.

Earl Unger, 20, of Woodville, was killed instantly and Joseph Bourdrie died later in a hospital. Those injured were Hazel Roth, 17, her two sisters, Irma, 15, and Gladys, 18, an infant brother, Roy Henry, 3, and Stanley Catcher, 22. Hazel and Irma suffered fractured skulls and are not expected to recover, according to reports from St. Vincent's Hospital. The car was demolished and several of the victims pinned under the wreckage.

FOUR INJURED

Passengers Escape in Headlong Collision of Trains

Sunbury, Pa., April 9—Four men were injured when a Williamsport to Port Clinton passenger train and a freight from Tamaqua crashed head on on the Reading railroad tracks two miles east of here today.

The injured are William Eisele, of Williamsport, and Louis Warhuese, of Newberry, engineer and fireman of the passenger train, and Robert Trute and Howard Houck, of Tamaqua, engineer and fireman of the freight. Railroad officials said that a mix-up in signals was the cause of the wreck.

Several passengers were badly shaken up but none was reported injured.

MARION IS LEADER IN POSTAL RECEIPTS

Local Postoffice Shows Increase While Other Cities Report Declines

Although 50 representative industrial cities throughout the United States showed an average decrease of 80 hundredths per cent in postal receipts for March of 1928 under March of the preceding year, the Marion postoffice showed a 24.70 percent increase in the same period, according to a report issued today from Washington.

Postal receipts, which are generally considered as a barometer of business conditions in any given locality, would indicate that Marion is enjoying greater prosperity than many other cities. The 50 representative cities showing a decrease were selected from all sections of the country. Seven are in Ohio.

According to Postmaster Crow's report, receipts for the Marion postoffice for March 1928 were $15,494.77 and for the same month of the year previous the receipts were $12,419, showing an increase of $3,075.77.

LABOR'S FIGHT TO CURB JUDGES APPARENTLY LOST

Washington, April 9—Organized labor's fight to curb the power of federal judges in the issuance of anti-strike injunctions apparently has been lost in the present session of Congress.

Although refusing the concrete defeat, backers of the many anti-injunction bills in both Senate and House today exhibited little hope of decisive action before adjournment.

TWO DEAD AND TWO INJURED IN GUN FIGHT

Battle Takes Place at Slab Run Near Portsmouth; Whisky Cause

MURDER CHARGE FILED

Altercation Ensues When One Refuses To Get Liquor for Another

Portsmouth, April 9—Two men are dead and two others are reported near death in hospitals here today as the result of a gun battle between deputy sheriffs and two men at Slab Run, near here last night.

Henry Bending, 31, a deputy sheriff, was shot through the head and killed instantly. Garner Vencil, 27, was shot in the abdomen and died in a hospital this morning. Allen Higgins is also in a hospital with serious knife wounds and Green Willis, 47, a deputy, has a bullet wound in his neck which is expected to prove fatal.

Edward Burton, 19, who was shot in the leg, was removed to the County Jail today, charged with murder.

Vencil and Burton are said to have encountered Higgins at a filling station just outside the city last night. An altercation began, according to reports, when Vencil asked Higgins to get him some whisky.

Two Draw Knives

Vencil was known as a tough character and had killed two men previously, according to police. When Higgins refused to go for whisky he and Burton drew knives and cut him seriously, according to reports. The fight continued, Higgins attempting to escape, and the other two following him until they had reached Slab Run, a small ravine a short distance down the road, spectators said.

By this time a call had been sent to the sheriff's office and the county car, occupied by Deputies Bending and Willis, Police Captain Lee Startzman and William Burns, a newspaper reporter, arrived a few minutes later.

Bending was driving. He stopped the machine, Willis stepped out, and shouted to the men that they were under arrest. Vencil and Burton both drew pistols, according to reports and began shooting.

Slumps Over Wheel

The first shot struck Willis' jaw and penetrated the back of his neck. He dropped to the ground and another bullet hit Bending. He slumped over the steering wheel, dead. Willis, though seriously wounded, returned the fire as he lay on the ground and Startzman also began firing from the automobile.

Vencil and Burton were finally subdued after, both had been wounded, Vencil fatally. Startzman and Burns were uninjured. Deputy Bending, who was killed, had been married only a few months ago.

GIGANTIC KIDNAPING, RANSOM PLOT NIPPED

Auto Dealers Rescued by Police; Seven Men Under Arrest

Chicago, April 9—A gigantic plot to kidnap a score of wealthy Chicagoans and hold them for ransom totaling $1,000,000, today was declared "nipped in the bud" with the roundup of the gang who kidnaped Thomas Gaynor, wealthy Chicago automobile dealer and hotel owner.

Gaynor, who was rescued Saturday by police in a cottage near Crystal Lake, was the first of the kidnapers' list of intended victims, according to investigators.

Seven men are under arrest for the kidnaping of Gaynor. An eighth is being sought. Two of the men were captured at the cottage as they stood guard over their wealthy victim.

Confronted with the evidence, three of the prisoners admitted the whole sale kidnaping plot, according to Deputy Police Commissioner O'Connor.

James McCormick, Gaynor's business associate, was one of the persons listed, O'Connor said. O'Connor made public none of their names, but withheld others.

Indiana Man Trapped in Freight Car Rescued Here

ERIE switchmen working in the railroad yards shortly after 12:30 this morning were startled to hear a voice coming from a sealed box-car in an eastbound freight train. Wrenching open the door, the switchmen found a young man who said he had been trying to get out of his traveling prison since the train left Hammond, Ind., where he had been unknowingly locked in.

Exhausting efforts he had been making for the past eight hours to get out of the car, the prisoner, who gave his name as John Kaminsky, 21, and his home as Hammond, was taken to police headquarters by the Erie police and was locked up pending a check of the car contents.

Captain of the Police F. E. Tobler, stated this morning that a check showed nothing had been taken and it was expected Kaminsky would be released today.

Kaminsky explained his presence in the car by saying he had crawled in at Hammond, Ind., without knowing it contained freight and before he could get out, the door had been shut and sealed.

Marion Man, Veteran of Many Battles, Tells of When Lincoln Visited Him in Hospital and Wept at His Bedside

Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of accounts relating the experiences of Marion's Civil War Veterans, representatives of what is now reverently referred to as "The Fading Line of Blue."

BY HALLIE HOUCK

"AS Lincoln sat on the high stool by my bed and I showed him the awful wound in my side, he broke down and cried like a child. He had entered the room with his generals, but they stood back while he made his way between the rows of beds in our ward. He stopped often to give some cheery greeting to a wounded boy, and finally he sat down by my bed. He was a fine man, good, and it showed in his face. When he made his speech at the hospital that day he stood just one row of beds behind me. He was a great man."

These are the words of James H. Buchanan, 343 Owens-st who can relate experiences of his during the Civil War that sound like adventures of a character in fiction. As he tells them, a person looking, listening, notices that his eyes have a far-away look as if he were seeing it all over again. What wouldn't a person today give to be able to glance back over the past and recall meeting men like Lincoln, Grant, Lee, Hancock, McClelland, and others equally famous as statesmen and generals?

Message from Grant

When Buchanan received the wound that later put him in the Fairfax Hospital, he was carrying a message from Grant to General Butler, at a signal tower some distance from Grant's troops. Part of the way was through a woods, and part through open country.

Tying his horse to a tree on the edge of the woods and seeing no one in sight on the open stretch, he got to the signal tower safely, delivered his message, took the enveloped marked "Received" and again safely crossed the plain.

Seeing no snipers, he stopped to soothe his horse. To this day he says that he heard no gun crack, but before he knew it he was stretched on the ground with what doctors later said was a mortal wound. Being out of sight from Grant's camp, the general and his officers rode up to determine what the shooting was about. Seeing the condition his messenger was in, the general dismounted and stooped by his side.

To Grant's Tent

Buchanan was carried to Grant's own tent where he was cared for a few days. Later he was transferred to a tent behind Grant's and it was here that his parents visited with him and listened to the general's plans for battles.

When taken to the hospital later, Buchanan was placed in a plaster cast and lay on his face for nine months. When his parents visited him at the hospital a wounded neighbor in the ward refused to uncover his face until just a few moments before they left.

"George," the neighbor had had his arm and leg shot off in a furious battle. When Buchanan asked him why he refused to look at his mother and father, tears gathered in "George's" eyes and his voice quivered as he replied, "I wish I could see my mother and dad again."

In a battle at Fredericksburg a shell burst close to Buchanan, burning his clothes from his body, and killing 16 men directly behind him. He said that he had seen 825 men go into a battle and a scant 200 come out alive. The hole in which he and his comrade lay after the shell exploded was so inaccessible that they lay there from Friday until Sunday night, and Saturday night there was a heavy snowstorm. Buchanan still marvels that he is alive today.

Spotted by Bushwhackers

In the battle of the Wilderness he was with Tyler's brigade, when a shot passed through his left foot, entered the right, and took off the small toe. He had been resting his horse, and bushwhackers had "spotted" him. Bushwhackers were the bane of every scout's life, and more to be feared than an army, is the knowledge that "Jimmy" Buchanan gained from his numerous encounters with them.

"A man under fire has no more sense than a pig, and he's afraid terribly so, until he comes to a hand-to-hand fight, and then watch out!" the Marion veteran says.

Many Confederate soldiers, shot on the field, and knowing that they couldn't live, asked that Union men show a little mercy and kill them, but Buchanan couldn't bring himself to kill a man who was down.

His compunction didn't assert itself, though, when he was in a foray such as took place on the Charles River Road. Soldiers were sent there expecting an attack. A church and schoolhouse were opposite each other on the road and a soldier was stationed behind each one, and Buchanan was sent out to do a little scouting. It was pitch dark, when he came up along a fence, almost hidden by thick growths of underbrush. He heard a slight noise, and quickly dropping to the ground and signaling to his horse to keep quiet, he crawled along towards the spot from where the sound had come.

Shoots First

As he drew near the fence a figure rose and outlined itself against the sky. "Quick-like I says to myself, get him before he gets you, and I up with my gun and gave it to him," Buchanan relates. "Sure enough, when some of our men rode up and we searched his body, I'd got him right through the middle of his chest."

Mr. Buchanan gives an unusually interesting account of a woman who joined the 126th Pennsylvania Infantry, and who was not found out until she was wounded and taken to a hospital.

"She stood not more than 50 feet from her and heard her give orders as sharp and quick as any commander I ever heard. Her voice was as coarse as a man's and she was large. Her soldiering was good enough that she was made a sergeant in the infantry," the Marion veteran relates.

"It seems that her lover joined the army, and seeing no other way that she might be near him, she joined the company he was in.

"He was killed in a battle and strangely, that same day, a private deserted. That same day, though, another company, the 126th Pennsylvania Infantry enlisted a 'man.' When it came out after her identity was discovered, she admitted that she was the one who had deserted and enlisted again the same day."

Mr. Buchanan received a letter from her not so long ago. She was living in the west, the mother of a large family, and recalled vividly the days of army life.

In 33 Battles

Buchanan was in 33 battles, of which Welding railroad, the Wilderness, Fredericksburg, Petersburg, Shenandoah and Antietam, are a few. He served under such generals as Sheridan, Butler, Meade, Hancock, Hooker, Grant, Burnside, McClellan and Tyler.

Hancock was the best loved general whom Mr. Buchanan served under, for he was agreeable, considerate and generous in his praise. The others were well-liked too, but Hancock was Buchanan's favorite and Butler his Nemesis.

"You could pass Butler 10 times a day, salute him a many times, and you might as well have been saluting some statue, for all the response you got from him. He never saluted and seemed to take it for granted that his high rank didn't call for a response. Now the other generals always saluted, and passed a kindly word, but not Butler! No, sir," the venerable Marion warrior states.

During Mr. Buchanan's numerous exploits and battles, six horses were shot from under him.

"Horses were trained to a trigger-fineness of obedience, and no one dared take a stick or gun in front of one of them," he relates. "Once when I was severely injured and needed prompt medical attention, the horse I had been riding for five months refused to let anyone come near me. Six men had to struggle to get him away from my side so that they might reach me and render medical aid. Oh, those horses had more sense than many of the men, and in a hand-to-hand battle

The dignity of marble
AND MORE

Squares of black marble as regal as onyx, lighter slabs of gray, tiny blocks of deep blue—this new Armstrong Floor has the dignity of marble. AND MORE! For underfoot it has all the warmth and resiliency of linoleum. More, too . . . for this floor glows with its Accolac finish. (No. 452.)

Women marvel at this added value in floors

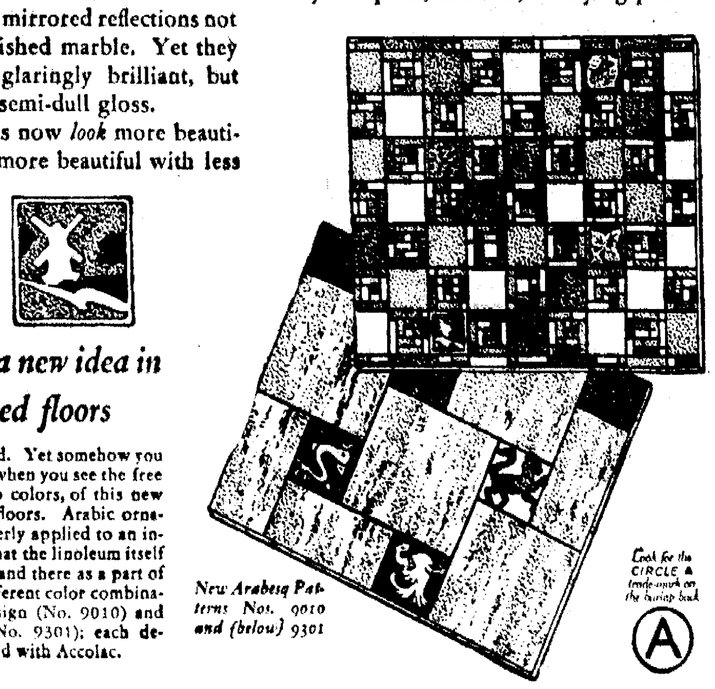
Accolac—soft-luster lacquer finish—causes comment at Spring Display of new Armstrong Floors

EVERY woman loves the rich and satiny gleam of well-cared-for floors. Yet every woman knows it is not always easy to keep them looking beautiful.

We urge you, then, to see the Spring Display of Armstrong's Linoleum now offered with the new lacquer finish—Accolac.

These floors have mirrored reflections not unlike those of polished marble. Yet they are not shiny or glaringly brilliant, but gleam with a rich, semi-dull gloss.

Armstrong Floors now look more beautiful. And they stay more beautiful with less attention from you because Accolac seals the very pores of the linoleum against dirt. This Accolac surface can be kept clean as easily as you dust well-polished furniture. And how simple a task waxing has become! Wax spreads out evenly over Accolac—ready for quick, uniform, satisfying polish.



New Arabesq Patterns Nos. 9010 and (below) 9301

Look for the CIRCLE A trade-mark on the burlap back

Arabesq — a new idea in low-priced floors

Arabesq is low-priced. Yet somehow you don't think of price when you see the free design, the full deep colors, of this new Armstrong idea in floors. Arabic ornamentation is so cleverly applied to an inlaid linoleum body that the linoleum itself peeps through here and there as a part of the pattern. Four different color combinations of the top design (No. 9010) and two of the lower (No. 9301); each design is protected with Accolac.

For smart shop or modern office
Snap . . dash . . eye-appeal

Rich marbled tones, patterns with interlocked corners, hand-set effects in a floor of undeniable richness—that's a short description of this new Armstrong creation. (Pattern No. 82.) It has the snap . . . dash . . . eye-appeal that the public demands in modern shops and offices. Armstrong's designers have created beauty in this floor—the Accolac finish now guards its beauty.

The How-to-decorate Book

"The Attractive Home—How to Plan Its Decoration" is a 32-page book by Hazel Dell Brown. In it, this popular decorator tells exactly how to plan the color scheme for any room and illustrates the story with fascinating full-color pictures of model interiors. Sent for ten cents.

New French Air Fighter.

A few days ago the cables told about a mighty fighting plane having been given a test by the British—a great bomber equipped with machine guns so located that they could repel the attacks of combat planes from above. From the cables, one might almost have assumed that the British had a monopoly on planes of the size and equipment of the one given its official trial.

As a matter of fact, it's a question if both Italy and France haven't fighting planes fully as powerful and as well armed, if not even better. Not so much is known of the big new combat planes of Italy, but France tested a monster combat plane, a few days ago, which carries six machine guns and at an altitude of 18,000 feet made 130 miles an hour.

This French plane is propelled by two 500-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors—the same as the motor used by Costes and Lebrix in their present five-continent flight—and its six guns, which are of unusual power, are so arranged that they can hold under fire an enemy approaching from any direction. Two of the six guns can fire downward below the plane and the other four, mounted in a pit in the fuselage, can fire in any direction save directly under the plane.

The French plan, it is understood, is to use big machines of this line as advance and rear guards for the giant bombers, in the number of which they excel all other powers.

Possibly it is owing to the fact that we are maintaining greater secrecy in our aeroplane development than other powers, but, whatever the explanation, it has been a long time since we have seen in type anything to indicate that we are keeping step with the other great powers in the construction of air machines for defensive and offensive purposes. It would be cheering to know that we are not hopelessly outdistanced in this respect by European nations.

An Amazing Showing.

"Does the remarkable reduction which has occurred in losses of freight due to robbery throw some light on the comparative efficiency of our railways and our governments?" asks the Railway Age in its last issue, and then it goes on to say: "Nobody claims, we believe, that our governments have recently reduced the amount of crime in the country, although the prevention of crime is one of their main functions; but the railways can point with pride to what railway police forces have accomplished in reducing losses of freight in transit resulting from robberies."

And then the Railway Age proceeds to compare the losses due to robberies from freight cars and other railroad property in 1920—the year in which loss and damage to freight from all causes, including robberies, which had increased steadily under government operation, reached their maximum—with the loss sustained through robberies in 1927.

Very naturally the Railway Age doesn't think much of government operation, and just as naturally it deals government operation a blow every time opportunity offers. That there is ground for a blow in this comparison will be conceded when the figures show that, whereas freight losses from robberies in 1920 amounted to $12,726,917, they were reduced in 1927 to $1,151,136. In a word, in 1927 they were less than nine per cent. of what they were in 1920.

This splendid showing in the protection of freight in transit is attributed by the Railway Age to increased efficiency of the personnel of the railway police forces; to closer cooperation between the police departments of different railways; to the placing of guards on trains carrying especially valuable shipments; to improved methods of patrolling yards and inspecting trains within yards and at water tanks, as well as to closer cooperation between the railway police and the police officers of cities, counties and states, and it closes by saying:

"Our governments all take a hand in regulating the railways; but it is extremely doubtful if any division of government can show such a record of efficiency in reducing crime of any kind as the railways can show in the reduction of robberies of freight. Perhaps our governments might profit, in dealing with the problems of crime, by studying the methods of the railways, which they consider need so much supervision and correction by them."

We haven't a doubt but what the marked decrease in loss of freight sustained by the railways of the land through robberies is in part due to the reasons offered by the Railway Age, but as we see it, the chief reason is the restoration of railroad morale, and we can not help but feel that the Railway Age knows it.

Under the government operation of the railroads which was inaugurated as a war measure, the morale of the railroads from top to bottom was shot to pieces. Taken over primarily to hasten the handling of freight to meet war problems, the railroads passed from the control of those who knew how to handle and maintain them to the control of those who did not. Demoralization resulted, and it went all along the line. Not only this, but a suspicion arose that the railroads were being used in an attempt to build up a mighty political machine. The suspicion may have been unjustified, but there was much to support it. In any event, the railroads could not have been much more greatly overmanned had the building of a political machine been the purpose of the accessions to the railroad forces. Tied hand and foot, railroad officials were unable to correct abuses, and when the roads were turned back to their owners they were transportation ruins.

Today the situation is changed. The railroads have come back, possibly not all the way, but very nearly so. Morale once more obtains. A report of an abuse is today given attention. No matter what the situation under government operation, today the railroads are being run regardless of whether votes are made or lost. Today railroading is again a business, conducted along business lines. Let us hope that it will remain such. Let us hope that the railroads will never again even fall under the suspicion of having become the framework of a political machine.

Vagrant Verse.

PASSING OF A STOIC.

Now stiff who once was willow,
Now bent who once was tall,
He walks along the garden
At noon and afternoon,
And while the buds are yellow
His life is at the fall,
Yet will he ask no pardon
Who never asked a boon.

With death he will not quarrel,
Nor bid the gods be kind,
The shadow of disaster
Has been his place of school,
And now he makes no moral
Of echoes in his mind
That tell of life the master
With whips for man the fool.

With eyes upon the gravel
He does not heed the year,
Among the lives that waken
He moves but does not live,
A bitter way to travel
He travels without fear,
But with no blessing taken
Goes on with none to give.

Welfare of Race Problem.

BY DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

My old friend, Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, of Battle Creek, is one of our most prolific writers on medical subjects of popular interest. We often disagree mildly on food matters, but no one can question the good his teachings have done.

I fully endorse this statement from Dr. Kellogg's pen: "We apply science to everything, but our own personal habits, the place where we should begin."

Society starts with the individual. An epidemic starts from the individual. The physical welfare of a people is after all nothing but the added health of a multitude of individuals.

The place where we must begin, if we would make any successful application of science to the improvement of mankind, is with the personal habits of each individual unit. Upon the individual rests the responsibility for his own physical welfare and, after that, for the welfare of the race.

The place to apply the world of knowledge in scientific progress, is to our own needs. Charity begins at home, it is said. So does health.

Wonderful progress has been made in the field of science. We know what kinds of food are good for the human family. We know what quantities of protein, fat, starch and sugar should be eaten by each of us. We know the dangers of overrating. We realize the unwisdom of under-feeding. Yet, too frequently, alas, we fail to apply to our own lives the rules which we loudly proclaim as the correct standards of health. We apply science everywhere except to our own habits.

Perhaps you are too old to learn any new habits. Indeed, if you can no longer learn something new, you have become old. When your habits are inflexible you are fossilized.

Of course, if your habits were good ones when they became fossilized, you are lucky. But if they become fixed before they had time to be made good, you are out of luck.

You should attempt to make your daily practice in bathing, clothing, eating, drinking, breathing, exercise and sleep, conform to the scientific standards. These standards have become pretty well fixed. You can find out what they are. Then, if you are wise and far-seeing, you will govern your life accordingly.

Get wisdom, get understanding, get knowledge. Apply your scientific knowledge to your own habits. That is the place to begin. By beginning here, you will order your own life as it should be. Then you will be an example to your children. Your family will practice the rules of health. The reputation of your household for proper living will travel abroad. In this way the practice of health will spread throughout society.

But let us begin at home to observe common sense in health matters.

Editorial Opinion.

M. POINCARE FOR CONCILIATION.

Premier Poincare's speech at Carcassonne, in the sunny south of France, contained utterances which ought to help lift the miasma of uneasiness hanging over Europe. For the first time since the war, the head of the French government permitted himself to speak favorably about conciliation with Germany.

True, M. Poincare has had an opportunity to become reconciled to the idea of Franco-German cooperation. For nearly two years, as premier of a coalition ministry, he has tolerated M. Briand as his minister for foreign affairs, although from the outset M. Briand has worked openly for closer intimacy between the two nations. But never during this time has M. Poincare as much as breathed a word of encouragement in public to the workers for Franco-German amity.

At Carcassonne the French premier turned definitely in a new direction. The change comes during a political campaign in which M. Poincare is fighting to prolong his hold on the helm of affairs; but whether he is actuated by political expediency or by a genuinely modified conviction is hard to decide.

In so far as the future of the Dawes plan is concerned, M. Poincare's speech is of interest to America as well as to Europe. There is reason to suppose that S. Parker Gilbert, the American agent general for reparations, had much to do with giving the French premier a new outlook on Franco-German relations. While Germany's other creditors in Europe have shown a willingness to consider Mr. Gilbert's plan to fix the total of reparations due them and to adjust the Dawes plan in such a way as to enable the Germans to liquidate their obligations within a fixed period of years, M. Poincare has seemed fearful of everything designed to give relief to Germany. He has treated the Dawes scheme as but another sanction, to be held over Berlin indefinitely, along with the Rhine occupation. The trend of events and feeling in Europe has made an anachronism of this die-hard Poincarist position. It is reassuring to find M. Poincare ready to acknowledge the inevitable.—Detroit Free Press.

AMERICA AND CHINA.

American diplomacy has just scored a triumph in China which history may find as epochal as John Hay's promulgation of the open door. It consists of a settlement of the Nanking massacre affair of March 24, 1927, negotiated by the United States minister to China, John V. A. MacMurray, with General Hwang Fu, foreign minister of the Nationalist government at Nanking.

The Chinese apologize for the excesses at Nanking, which cost an American life and inflicted serious damage upon American property; promise reparations and punishment of the guilty persons and pledge security for the future. On our own art, the United States "deplores" the injury done and the Chinese lives lost consequent upon the bombardment of Nanking by American warships following the riot. As a special gesture of good will the American note bringing matters to a conclusion with the Nanking government reiterates our readiness to revise the "unequal treaties" which are at the root of Nationalist China's bitter hostility to the "foreign devils."

Internationally, the signal importance of the settlement is American recognition of the de facto status of the Nationalist government. Of even greater significance, certainly as far as the United States is concerned, is the fact that Mr. MacMurray brought his pourparlers with General Hwang Fu to a successful termination after Japan's negotiations along similar lines had broken down and while Great Britain's negotiations are dragging on. The Chinese have traditionally looked upon this country as the most, if not the only, truly disinterested power essaying to mold Chinese destinies. If Nationalist China is ordained to become the ruling force over all China, the diplomatic history which Minister MacMurray has just written should be to the lasting advantage of the United States.

The Coolidge administration is entitled to feel that its "Chinese policy" has been vindicated. A year ago, when the world's eyes were riveted upon the civil war in China and alarm was universal that foreign lives and property were in gravest jeopardy, certain powers evinced a desire for another allied punitive expedition, 1900 model, that would bring the Chinese to their senses. The president and Secretary Kellogg set their faces like flint against such a project. They let it be known that American forces would be used in China exclusively for the defense of endangered American nationals and their interests. To that policy this country has resolutely adhered. It has reaped the fruits of its restraint in the MacMurray-Hwang Fu treaty of amity and good will.—Washington Star.

Wisdom shall give to thine head an ornament of grace: a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.—Proverbs 4:9.

The Dreams of Science.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

The fine mania that there is not much difference apparent between some of the grandiose dreams that speculating minds build upon the puzzles that spring like Jack-in-the-box out of its laboratory experiments, and the crank inventions in pseudo-science offered by the H. G. Wells school of fiction to a multitude of hungry minds.

The motto of modern science is:

"Generalize and again generalize, and yet once more generalize!"

Forgetful of the words of Bacon, a man who was wise not for his own generation alone, there are some who appear to think the whole universe can be chained in a "law" formulated in a little man-made laboratory!

It is a good thing to recall Bacon's famous "idols" of the mind, particularly the "Idola Tribus" or "Idols of the tribe," i. e., of our race in general. Conspicuous among these he puts "the proneness to suppose in nature greater order and regularity than there actually is; the tendency to support a preconceived opinion by affirmative instances, neglecting all negative or opposed cases; and the tendency to generalize from few observations, or to give reality to mere abstraction, figments of the mind."

He warns against the errors that result from weakness of the senses, "which affords scope for mere conjecture," from "the restless desire of the mind to penetrate to the ultimate principles of things, and from the belief that man is the measure of the universe, whereas in truth the world is received by us in a distorted and erroneous manner"—owing to the weakness of our physical senses.

Now I should, I hope, be the last person in the world to throw any obstacle in the way of the spread of scientific knowledge, or of well-founded scientific speculation, which often opens the only road to knowledge; but, on the other hand, I believe that all educated men and women should prepare themselves to enter the grand and swiftly expanding World's exposition which modern science keeps continuously open, in some better attitude of mind than that of the traditional "country bumpkin" going to the circus in a mood to accept with wide-eyed wonder but with complete credulity anything that "Barnum says."

Science is not helped, but harmed, by some of its present-day touts. It is becoming to neither its dignity nor its truth that it should be constantly held up as the sole regulator of human intelligence, the universal cure-all for every human ill, whether physical, mental or moral, the one answer of every possible question, the only refuge for the human soul, or, still worse, the infallible negator of the soul's existence.

Upon some minds an imperfect knowledge of what science really does know seems to have a shriveling effect, and they shrink until nothing but purely material conception can find room in them, and until the idea of God itself is dwarfed into a machine-made mental tool, across whose tool-turned forehead is stamped the lampoon: "Science."

True science is the second glory of man, the first being his moral sense.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, April 9—Diary of a modern Pepys: Aroused by a merry telegram from Courtney Ryley Cooper in the Colorado hinterland, and with a friend to his safety deposit box and watched him clip coupons from a sheaf of bonds, a grim reminder to those who waste.

And an old lady there adorned herself with jewels and put them away again and an attendant said she came once a week to indulge her vanity. So to lunch at a place where waiters were costumed as clowns and amusing, too, but the food very poor.

In the evening to a dinner for some advertising gentlemen from Detroit and Dr. George Horsey, Ray Long, Brigadier General Reilly and Irvin Cobb made brave speeches and I, too, made an effort, my voice trailing off into a squeak. And Sneeze, the black boy, sang "Room 202" gaily. So late to bed.

* * *

New York's amazing curiosity is expressed at the opening of a conspicuous theatrical performance. The curious gather at dusk and go without dinner to stand around the entrance for a peep at the sprinkling of celebrities who may arrive. Nobodies are targets for a little kidding from the sidelines as they go through the police-made lane. Joe Donkes may be greeted with the cry: "Here comes Jack Barrymore" and taunted into blazing blushes. When Mayor Walker comes up with an official clatter, he is certain to receive a round cheer, that is if they haven't all gone by that time.

* * *

Mons. Ziegfeld, who has always been ahead of the pack with extravagant curtains, surpasses previous efforts this year. In one of his extravaganzas there is a curtain of ostrich tails, and when its furred magnificence is revealed the collective feminine gasp is something that must even warm the icy heart of the little father of the Follies.

* * *

It is always good fun watching Ziegfeld when he is dragged from the wings at a premiere to take a bow. He, of course, favors the idea or he would not be waiting on the sidelines, but when he faces lights and welcoming roar he suffers from the most delightful bit of stage fright seen hereabouts. And he is not acting. A queer impressario—this Ziegfeld. He can sulk over a nickel and smile over a burst of extravagance that plunges his confreres into despair. Daily he nurses a new and imaginary grievance. One moment he hates actors and the next he will sign them at unheard-of salaries with a friendly pat on the back. He swims up from sleep every morning at 6 o'clock to grab a telephone and whine his woe. And begin what is for his executives a hectic day. He will spend hundreds of dollars on trivial telegrams and waste minutes pondering if a four-cent letter can be dispatched for two cents. He seems to vacillate all over the Rialto, yet no producer is so sure of himself. He's a wise theatrical bird.

In a Fifth avenue window are displayed silk pajamas at $48 for five and six-year-old boys which must be a shock to those whose boyhood was spent slumbering in the attic in flour sacks with cut-out arm holes.

* * *

He was one of those boys with his hat rim swept down all way around, a capsule mustache, cab driver's overcoat and a great curved cane with a yelow handle—streaking it up the avenue with the grace of a gazelle. At Fiftieth street he darted across the street ahead of traffic in a series of Isadore Duncan skips and the booming voice of an uncouth bus topper called out: "If you don't make it safely, dearie, I'll scream."

* * *

I wonder if others have noted the gaiety of the bus tops. There is a camaraderie among those perched upstairs not found many places in the city. If they ever start razzing you, take the tip of one who knows—sneak swiftly up a side street and hide in a doorway. They can make you redden to the roots of your hair, if any.—Copyright, 1928, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

If you are not trusted you are not happy. Nothing will make a man more endurably miserable than the knowledge that those intimately associated with him do not trust him. Most men have within themselves the capacity for making other men have faith in them—if they will exercise that capacity. Often the temptation to disregard an obligation or to take a "short cut" which it not quite honest is very great—so great that many of us at times give way to it. That brings about lack of trust on the part of others—and thereby we enter into a life of discontent and unhappiness.

* * *

It has long been a matter of habit to criticize public service—public utilities like the telephone, street cars, gas and electric service. Telephones, especially, have come in for the barrage of jokesmiths, letter writers and newspaper editors. But the fact is—apparent to the fair-minded—that the change and improvement in telephone service in America is one of the most outstanding developments of modern industrial civilization. Today a long distance call can be made between cities thousands of miles apart in from one to three minutes. Frequently a long-distance call requires less than half a minute, or no longer than a local call. Such service is of recent development. Motor car and aeroplane development has been so much more dramatic and spectacular that few have given much thought to what has been going on in the telephone world.

* * *

There are a few of us who, in our sentimental moments, do not think we would like to have time turn backward in its flight and make us boys and girls once again. Eugene Field, carrying with him the spirit of youth to the day of his death, wrote:

"I'd like to sleep where I used to sleep
When I was a boy—a little boy."

We forget that when we were children we were not quite so happy as we think we were. The sorrows of childhood are exceedingly real. The worries and anxieties of boyhood and girlhood were as unescapable and devastating as they are today. Looking backward, life seems like a long summer afternoon in those golden days. But it wasn't. With conscience clear and mind at rest with the consciousness of work done as well as we know how, the chance for happiness today is as good for any of us as it was in childhood.

* * *

Age is the happiest period of all. Age when it follows a decently spent life, is free from worries and anxieties than any other period. The fires of ambition no longer consume us. The fading of illusions need not mean loss of faith, and cynicism. Rather age may bring merely a clearer, more honest acceptance of the facts of life. And that is always the way to peace of mind.

Do not fear age. Look forward to it with comfort.

Supply Is Limited.

A Ming vase brought $18,500 at an auction in London the other day. It seems like a lot of money for a mere vase, but perhaps Mr. Ming is dead and won't make any more.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There are a whole lot of honest, intelligent people in this country, and if they would only condescend to get into politics they could run the country in a nice, respectable way.—Detroit Free Press.

HOPE FOR COAL LAW PRACTICALLY GONE.

Senate Committee Plans To Examine Witnesses Until May 20

Washington, April 9.—Hope for enactment of coal legislation at this session practically vanished today.

Under an agreement reached today, the Senate Coal Committee, which resumed its strike investigation after a 10-day recess, plans to examine two witnesses daily through May 20. Congressional leaders expect an adjournment by May 19. This would put coal bills over until next fall.

Some committee members indicated, however, they might introduce coal regulatory measures while the hearings are running in an effort to lay the groundwork for legislation next year.

OFFICIALS FAIL TO AGREE ON CAUSE OF MAN'S DEATH

Alliance, April 9—After a week's probe into the death of C. W. Mather, local auto dealer, officials of Stark and Knox Counties today were apparently unable to agree as to how Mather met his fate.

The dealer's charred body was discovered April 1 in his burned automobile near Mt. Vernon. While Coroner C. L. Harmer, of Knox County has rendered a verdict of homicide, Coroner T. C. McQuate of Stark County, is inclined to believe that Mather committed suicide.

With Miss Ona Ring, a companion, Miss Wilbur had strayed from a trail to a narrow ledge where one mis-step in the darkness meant a possible plunge from the edge of a 1,500 foot cliff. Screams of the two girls attracted rescuers, who extradicted them from the precarious position by means of a long rope.

Congregations Fill Local Churches to Capacity at Services on Easter Day

Unfavorable Weather Fails To Lower Attendance; Sunrise Meetings Are Special Feature of Day's Observance

Although a disappointment to many as far as the weather was concerned, Easter Sunday in the various local churches proved quite as beautiful and impressive as in former years. There was large attendance at the Easter services in nearly all churches. The various pastors preached sermons appropriate to the religious festival and the music by the various church choirs was arranged to correspond with the theme of the day.

Outstanding in the day's observance were the "sunrise prayer services" held at Calvary and Oakland Evangelical, Epworth and Prospect Street M. E., First Reformed, Emmanuel Baptist, Forest Lawn Presbyterian and Pilgrim Holiness Churches and the First Church of Nazarene.

Passion Play Presented

The passion play was presented by Dr. L. A. Bongstead of Delaware last night at Prospect Street M. E. Church and an Easter sermon was given by Rev. E. P. Ellyson of Kansas City at the same hour at the Nazarene Church. Churches at which pageants and cantatas were given were Emanuel Lutheran, Forest Lawn, St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran and Central Christian Churches and the Church of Brethren. The day also served to bring to a close revivals at Trinity and Emmanuel Baptist and First United Brethren Churches.

At First Reformed Church a vesper service was held in the afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Wesley W. Kaupe rendering as guest soloists. There was large attendance. In the morning 16 new members were received into the church, and the building fund campaign closed at the Sunday School session, with a $2,350 contribution. Women were reported victorious in the attendance contest brought to a close at that time.

Attendance of 193

An attendance of 193 at the Sunday School session features Easter Day at Emmanuel Baptist Church. In the morning Rev. Earl L. Holliday, pastor, preached on the subject, "They Have Taken Away My Lord" and at night on "The Resurrection." Three were baptised and a communion service was held.

Large attendance was reported for both services at Calvary Evangelical Church yesterday when Rev. E. Radebaugh preached two Easter sermons, in the morning on the subject, "Easter," and at night on the subject, "The First Resurrection." Features of the service were the special numbers by Miss Pauline Zachman, organ, Miss Charlotta Courtney, piano, the vocal solo by Miss Mary Jane Reamsnyder, the anthem, "Rosanna," Granier, by a girls' chorus of 25 voices, "Jesus Lives Today," by the men's chorus, and anthems by the choir with solos by Mrs. A. L. Wood, Mrs. LeRoy Midlam and L. D. Zachman.

Church Filled

The church was filled to capacity for the Easter service yesterday morning at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The rector, Rev. S. S. Hardy, preached a beautiful Easter sermon and special music was sung by the choir, directed by Ernst C. Curl and assisted by Mrs. J. Malcolm Strelitz. Lilies and spring flowers decorated the altar and church. The usual Easter masses were celebrated at St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Man and Girl from Marion Injured in Auto Crash at Columbus

Ernest Gates, 27, and Margaret Powell, 13, of this city are recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident at Columbus yesterday afternoon, according to a news report received from that city today.

According to the dispatch, the two were injured when the automobile in which they were riding with Sanford Whitlatch, of Columbus, collided with another car. Gates sustained a fractured right arm and bruises on the right knee. The dispatch did not state the extent of the girl's injuries. Efforts to locate addresses of the injured couple here, were unsuccessful.

HELD IN JAIL

Man Refuses To Wear Clothing, Faces Insanity Charge

Announcing that he had been ordered by the Lord to wear no clothing, Herman Waldron, 42, of Middleport, locked himself in the bath room at the home of B. L. Keefe [illegible] Windsor-st early Saturday afternoon where he remained until 8 o'clock Saturday night when he was removed by the police and taken to the county jail on an insanity charge.

Waldron, who secured a room at the Keefer home, had not eaten any food since Friday noon. Saturday afternoon he locked himself in the bath room and removed all of his clothing. When efforts to induce him to unlock the door failed, members of the family notified the police, who persuaded him to unlock the door and after getting him into at least a portion of his clothing, took him to the county jail.

MAN SUSPECTED OF ASSAULT ARRESTED

Otis Simpson Held Pending Investigation of Companion's Injuries

Otis Simpson, negro, 23, of 349 N. State-st, is being held at police headquarters on an investigation charge, pending the outcome of injuries received by Robert Butler, who is at the City Hospital suffering from a cut on the head.

At 2:35 o'clock this morning the police received a call from Simpson at Commercial and Silver-sts. When they arrived they found Butler lying in the street with his head in Simpson's lap and bleeding from a deep cut across the back of his head. The W. C. Boyd ambulance was summoned by the police and Butler, who was unconscious, was taken to the City Hospital.

Simpson's Story

Simpson told the police that Butler had fallen and struck the back of his head on the curb. Not satisfied with his story, however, he was taken to police headquarters, where he was locked up, pending further investigation.

It was stated at the City Hospital this morning that Butler had recovered consciousness and it was not thought his injuries were serious. It is the belief of the police that the two, who were with two women, had gotten into a quarrel and that Butler had been struck by Simpson. This, however, was denied by Simpson. Butler had not been questioned yet this afternoon.

FLOOD PERIL

Northern Vermont and New Hampshire Water Rising

St. Johnsbury, Vt., April 9—Another flood peril stalked over northern Vermont and sections of upper New Hampshire today, although the sudden shift of cold weather brought some relief.

The Connecticut River was reported at record height in Gilman and Lancaster. The boom dam at Gilman went out with a roar and the rushing water swept two automobiles along the Lunenberg Highway. On the highway as far as Lancaster, N. H., water was four feet deep.

Water reached the first floor of several houses on the lowlands of barnet. Lumber was swept onto the railroad tracks there.

Washouts caused Montreal and Boston express trains to run from 10 to 12 hours late.

O'NEILL STILL MISSING

Sleuths Unable To Find Man Wanted as Oil Trial Witness

Paris, April 9—Despite a vigorous four-year search throughout Europe for James E. O'Neill, missing witness in the Teapot Dome oil investigation and the criminal conspiracy trial of Harry F. Sinclair, the elusive American still was in his unknown hiding place, when the Sinclair trial opened today in Washington.

Every clew as to O'Neill's whereabouts has been exhausted. Continental Europe has been subjected to a fine tooth scrutch. Ships, railway stations and hotels have been watched. O'Neill's villa at Chantilly has been under continuous surveillance.

In view of the American's ability to elude the arms of professional and amateur sleuths in Europe, a belief has gained ground in some quarters that O'Neill may have returned to America in disguise, although this would be difficult owing to passport complications. However, it is pointed out that, as the search was concentrated upon Europe, O'Neill might have been able to slip away and get to the United States, where, it is understood, little effort has been made to trail him.

"BOMB" LINDBERGH WITH EGGS AT BARBECUE PARTY

Santa Barbara, Cal., April 8—While Col. Charles A. Lindbergh remained in secluded privacy at the Montecito Estate of Mrs. Laura J. Knight, near here today, the thoroughfares buzzed with talk of the Easter "bombardment" to which the lone ace and a group of friends were subjected at a barbecue in his honor.

Procuring two dozen eggs, Dr. J. Bert Saxby, Jr., and Jack Ballard, guests at the barbecue, slipped away from the scene of festivities, took an airplane aloft at a nearby air field, and proceeded to hurl the eggs down upon the barbecue party. All the guests, including Colonel Lindbergh, fled for shelter.

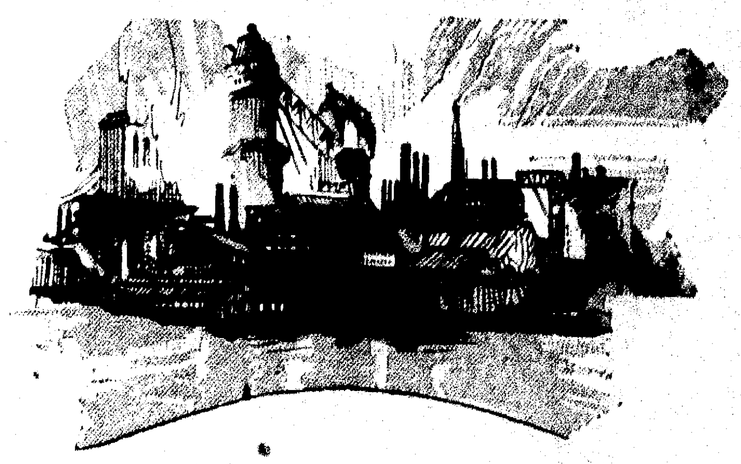
Politics Never Fostered Industrial Growth



Business is Business and Politics is Politics.

The gas rate is a business proposition and should not be permitted to continue a football of politicians.

Politics never helped a city forward; never fostered new industries; never fed the working man and his family.

So let's take politics out of the gas rate. For more than three years politicians have made it impossible to settle upon a fair rate. In those three years both Marion and Your Gas Company have suffered.

There's absolutely nothing unfair in what your Gas Company asks. Your Gas Company is human—just as yourself. It costs you more money to live today than fifteen years ago. It is impossible to bring gas to Marion as cheaply as fifteen years ago and make a living wage. Gas must be brought from a greater distance. Service must be increased—this costs Your Gas Company thousands of dollars.

Your City Council should settle the gas rate now and for the years to come. It is up to you as a good citizen of Marion to support your council for taking the case out of politics and giving a fair [illegible]

FEELING BETTER THAN SHE HAS IN PAST TWO YEARS

Konjola Ended Her Stomach Trouble and Brought New Health

MRS. HARRY GEISLER

New feelings of health come from the effect of Konjola in a natural and safe way. The action of this medicine is amazingly quick and the relief, in nearly all cases, is permanent and sure. For example, Mrs. Harry Geisler, 1486 Cleveland Ave., Columbus, Ohio, tells how Konjola helped her back to new health.

"My system was in a badly rundown condition for two years," said Mrs. Geisler, "and I was told my whole trouble was caused by a bad stomach. It seemed that every bite of food brought gas on my stomach and I suffered with dreadful pains in my right side. I had nervous indigestion of the worst kind and didn't know what a good night's sleep was like. I was also in mysery with headaches and dizzy spells.

"Konjola acted differently from anything I had ever tried before. It helped my food digest better within a few days and I could eat a meal without having gas bloating and indigestion pains afterward. The headaches and dizzy spells disappeared and a new feeling of health came over my whole system. Konjola certainly did everything claimed for it in my case."

Konjola is different than any other known remedy in this section. It contains twenty-two juices extracted from natural plants which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels to a more healthy action. The effect of Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that had been going on for years. At the same time many weak and rundown systems have been restored to a new state of health through this compound. Such a vast number of men and women in this city have told of their experience with this new medical product until now Konjola is the most highly indorsed medicine that is known in this vicinity.

Konjola is strongly recommended here in Marion at Stump & Sams Pharmacy, and is also being sold by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this section.—Adv.

CHAPTER 18

F

...thoughts on Zeke Bent... ...wanderers back to ... "She didn't have time to ... money," he reflected ... I get over into Canada ... under an assumed name. ... and send me the ... What a fine woman she is ... a true friend she's been to ... Lonesse of me I suppose ... her job in the Forest Service ... will have Honey Valley and she ... that or mortgage it and buy ... and operate the ranch. She's ... but she knows how. Ah, ... Monica. What a prize! Yes! ... There was a time when you ... been happy with me for the ... and, feel that I was, I didn't ...

... horse picked his way up the ... side of Engel's Knob, climbing ... a mile to boulder, squeezing care... through the growth of scrubby ... pole pine, resting when he felt ... need of it, commencing the hard ... again when he had in a measure ... his breath. Halfway up ... Mason dismounted and walked beside ... They came to the bare crest of ... Knob and looked about them.

Two miles to the north a terrifying spectacle presented itself—a wall of flame half a mile deep, extending in a ... east and west of Engel's ... immediately in front the fire ... had got into a patch of spruce and the ... flames were leaping through the ... growth with a rapidity of repulsion.

There were two sheets of fire—that in the undergrowth and that in the crowns of the spruce; and in the crowns the morning breeze was a lethal ally. From crown to crown the horses leaped with the speed and agility of a demoniac ape; a vast, thunderous crackling heralded the approach of this hideous advance-guard to the main armory of destruction.

The smoke rolled in clouds a thousand feet skyward; the sparks, coals, flaming twigs and pieces of bark were spewed upward and outward with the vacuum created by the terrific heat, which already was being reflected from the granite face of Engel's Knob.

"She's got a fine start, Baldy," the man murmured. "Probably been burning 24 hours and the fog hid the smoke. Well, they can't blame Monica for not reporting it. And I'm cut off from June-bug! We can't stay here, either, Baldy. This scrubby growth on Engel's will burn clear to the crest, and you'll go crazy and run into it and get burned to death. You're too good a horse for that, Baldy.

"But what shall we do? That's the question. Cut off from June-bug and forced back on Tantrum Meadows—and that way the sheriff and his posse are waiting. Cut off from the country to the west, too, because by the time we can get back that way that flank of fire will have swung east before the north-west breeze and pinched us back to where we came from.

"We're caught between the points of a horseshoe of fire—and that fire will burn like the mill-tails of hell until it reaches the north fringe of Tantrum Meadows; then it will drive east. I can't follow it because there'll be an army of men fighting it and back-firing from the east, and I can't win through them.

"If I try to get out of Tantrum Meadows at its narrow western end I'll be blocked by the fire when it crosses eastward on the other side of Tantrum. Yes, there's a chance it will do that and climb up over Bogus. Monica's there alone—she'll stick at the lookout till the last—she hasn't any horse . . ..

"Come on, Baldy horse, we're going back to Bogus—back in broad daylight and damn the odds. You're going back to Zeke Bentley, Baldy, and I'm going back to hell. Come on, boy, we've got to get out of here a-flyin'."

Down the rough southern slope of Engle's Knob they went—now walking, now leaping, now trotting, now galloping whenever a fairly clear space of 50 yards showed. Baldy was trembling with fear, but once ... on the terrifying sight, the soothing voice of his rider, the gentle strokes on his wet shoulders and neck, reassured him. Mason rode with a loose rein, giving the horse his head, confident that the animal would, with the instinct and practice of a mountain-bred horse, pick the best route.

Arrived at the base of the Knob, Mason pulled up and looked back. The fire was just climbing over the crest of Engel's! It had swept around the Knob, too, and was roaring down the canyon to the east. "Got to get through that spruce and juniper ahead and on to the more open pine timber beyond," he thought, "or we'll be pinched off. All or nothing, Baldy." And he urged the gallant animal to greater speed.

But fast as they proceeded, the fire was faster, for in spruce and juniper a forest fire will travel faster than a horse. The roar of the crackling crowns, the thud of falling, half burned limbs swelled to a roar like unto that of a furious sea, and the heat brought out the perspiration in great beads on man and horse.

But Bob Mason knew better than to attempt to run before the fire. His sole hope lay in winning off to a flank ... getting out of its way and into timber where its progress would be slower and his faster.

Baldy grunted as he collided with a young spruce, and the man cried in agony as he felt the skin, the flesh perhaps, ripped from his knee. He felt numb, bewildered with pain and heat, and for the first time in many a year he "clawed leather," for little burning particles were dropping on Baldy's quarters and causing him to pitch instinctively in self-protection and protest as they burned through the hair.

But he gallant animal ... ...ir's forward course, ...ock mane was ... ...ing to ... ...ean and the unmistakable ... ...of burning hair was in Bob ... ...ils be... ...fore the timber thinned perceptibly and the ground commenced to slope ... a flat.

Baldy screamed in fear and agony, but at the encouraging shout from his rider redoubled his efforts. Now they were in a pretty little piece of park land perhaps 200 yards wide and three miles long, and through the center of it ran the west fork of June-bug Creek, a wide, deep stream with high, precipitous banks. But a mile to the west Bob Mason knew the creek flattened out and he could ford it there. He turned Baldy's head in that direction and for the first time removed his hat and struck the horse with it.

Down the long meadow they flew and now every drop of the three-quarters of thoroughbred blood came to life in that horse. Stretched low, his head flung outward, his scorched ears bent directly forward, he spurned the bush green grass the soft dirt of many a race-track.

He avoided springy wet ground and cleared four-foot windfalls without a thought of what lay on the other side and gradually the heat grew less, the hideous sound of the devouring flames died in the distance, and the lord of the west fork was before him . . . . They were into it, off it, floundering in a deep pot-hole, swimming for a moment.

Then Baldy's forefeet clawed the gravel on the edge of the pot-hole and with a great gasping grunt he crawled half-way out, then stood and dropped his hot muzzle to the cooling surface. The man leaned down and scooped water up in his hat and drank as eagerly as the horse.

But he was far too good a horseman to permit his mount to drink his fill. He had no desire to founder Baldy. Across the ford they plunged and into the timber on the other side.

"No rest, Baldy, old man," his rider crooned. "The west fork isn't wide enough to stop a forest fire that travels in 50-yard leaps. On your way, lad."

Straight up a hill they labored, and at its crest Bob Mason pulled up. A mile to the west another fire had started and was gaining furious headway—ferocious tribute to the power of wind-driven cinders.

He was being driven eastward again to the other point of the fiery horseshoe! And again he asked himself, "Can I win through between both points? Well, we'll try, Baldy."

Taking a quartering course they plunged forward, up hill and down dale, in and out between great brown tree trunks, stumbling over smooth rocks hidden in a deceitful carpet of brown pine needles, ripping through buck thrush, white-thorn and manzanita; torn, bleeding, fainting they pressed forward.

Bob Mason could not tell from which direction the heat was greatest—the east or the west. All he knew was that the western point of the horseshoe was advancing with twice the speed of the other point, forcing him up to the latter.

Baldy was pent. To force him now without a breathing spell, would mean that he must fall from exhaustion, and once he went down Bob Mason knew he would not get up. And without Baldy he knew he could never reach the safe haven of Tantrum Meadows. Indeed, but for the momentary refreshment gleaned in the ford of the west fork of June-bug, they could not have come as far as they had.

He dismounted, removed the saddle, massaged the horse's back, readjusted the saddle-blanket and saddled again. This operation, he knew, would ease the bruised and aching muscles of Baldy's tired back and withers. Then he went forward at a running walk, gazing calmly about him, estimating his chances and the lay of the country before him.

Presently he descended into a little valley, and, to the west of it a spur thrown across cut off the wind from that direction. "The fire from that quarter will drop to half-speed for a while," was the hunted man's comforting thought, "so we'll not be in too great hurry, Baldy. Take it easy, old man. Down in that valley there's a spring and another drink waiting for us. Easy, boy. Easy does the trick—oh, good Jesus Christ!"

The words were not a blasphemy. They fell from his dry lips as an agonized prayer, a plea for mercy. From where he was he had a clear glimpse of the narrow little canyon below him—a narrow strip of park land, like all these hidden mountain valleys and passes, and through the center of it ran the road from Ranger Headquarters up to the June-bug Creek station, where it joined the June-bug trail—wide enough for an automobile to travel—and continued on up into the Modoc country.

Mason knew that people not connected with the personnel of the Sau Dimas National Forest quite frequently used this road—or trail, as it really was—to avoid a long detour over the county and state highways; hence, as he topped the rise, he paused and swept the trail with anxious eyes, for he half expected to see it lined with trucks filled with hastily recruited fire fighters sent up by the chief ranger.

Instead, he saw approaching swiftly from the direction of June-bug a small automobile with one person in it; at the speed with which it came down the little valley Mason knew the motorist barely won through from June-bug and was hoping to get safely to the country farther west.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and my grandfather says spring has began, because we had thunder showers and sunshine all day.

When I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth it was raining, but it had stopped by the time I was on my way to the barn with my milk pail. Then I fed my face and got washed by my aunt. If things need dirt to grow it is no wonder I don't grow up. I never will with my aunt around. I bet she would like to have the top of my head shaped like a soap dish so that I could carry a bar of soap in it, and every time it rained I would get a bath. She must be offal dirty if she thinks other people need washing so often.

A fella certainly does feel stiff and newish when he starts to Sunday school with a necktie on and his face clean and a handkerchief sticking out of his pocket. Feeble said I looked like something cut out of a male order catalog, and I said she looked like something cut out of a female order catalog, and she grabbed her heart and rolled her eyes and said "Migosh the kid's getting clever." I don't know what there was clever about that, only that she looks like something the cat would carry out if it had a chance, and bury it, and not like anything in a catalog. She knew her Sunday school lesson and got a card with a picture and a golden text on it.

When we were all walking home together and just before we got to a crossing Feeble dropped her card and it lit right beside the gutter which was full of rain. The Lost Bag of Trips which is trying to shine up to her made a jump for it, and he was between her and the ditch before she noticed to see that she had dropped the card. Feeble yelled and gave a jump for it and hit with her whole weight on the highest part of the Lost Bag of Trips and his face was so close to the water that he didn't have time to put his hands out to save himself, so that his head went ... Then he finally got ... that the ... to his ... which ... down, and Feeble said, "Oh, thank you, Banty!" Then we all gave the poor mut setting in the gutter the hooraw.

I said to Feeble "I bet you dropped that card on purpose," and she said, "My goodness! The first thing anyone knows you'll be saying that the sun rises in the east." I said, "It does." She needn't think I am that dumb.

But don't expend any of your worry upon Junior. We'll look after him. Just don't pull any foolhardy stunts yourself. Watch your own step until we're out of this mess.

"Of course, the first thing is the deciphering of your copy of that paper we found in the miniature case," Lillian went on. "I've a hunch that the answer to the whole thing lies in that. She hasn't any idea you've seen that, has she?"

"I'm sure not," I replied, "but I can't get to work on that or anything else until I've made sure that the girl has better safeguards thrown around her than Jerry Tiger and that wolfhound."

"I am afraid Jerry can be discounted, but Fedor is worth a regiment," she answered. "However, I agree with you, but on one thing I shall be adamant. You're not going to spare anybody from the farmhouse. Both Dicky and Jim ought to be here—and I think Dicky should be told of this. We can't very well ask him to be on his guard without telling him what it's all about."

I looked at her quizzically.

"How much do you think you'll have to tell Dicky?" I asked.

"I don't know," she said reflectively. "He has some knowledge, that's a cinch, but how much is another question. But don't you agree with me—"

"I shall tell him nothing," I said with the memory of Dicky's provoking behavior concerning the red-bearded man, still strong upon me. "But you have my permission to give him any information you think best. But we can't wait for his return. I feel very strongly that somebody must watch over that house tonight."

Agreed, and I doubt if you'll have to say a word officially about it. Why is as logical a candidate for the job as the gentleman who so strenuously desires to make the fugitive princess his daughter-in-law."

"Pierre Vertigen!" I uttered the name mechanically, for I was a bit startled at the justness of her solution. It had not occurred to me.

"The same."

"But, do you think he knows?" I ought not tell him the girls secret if he doesn't."

"You won't have to. He probably doesn't know of the danger she's in, but I'll bet on your glass eardrops that you can't keep him any other news concerning the Princess Olina of Transylvania, or any of her relatives. The silly old tuft hunter! But we need him in our business just now. I'll telephone him to come over right away to see me on a very important business matter. That lets you out, so if there's any cheeping about the call from the Dicky-bird, I can take all the blame."

Marysville, April 9—A suit has been filed in the local Common Pleas Court by Prosecuting Attorney R. C. Thrall against George Feusel and others, asking a lien on the interest of Wilmer Feusel, in a property in South Plum-st. It is claimed by the plaintiff that there is due the sum of $931.40 on Feusel's fine of $1,000 assessed against him in the court of Justice of the Peace Aaron Robinson, on a charge of transporting intoxicating liquor. Feusel is a minor and had intended evading the payment of the fine by staying in jail 60 days and obtaining his freedom through the insolvency law. It was found that he had an interest in the above property and execution was issued for a lien on the same.

BANK WINS SUIT

Controversy Over Cashier's Check Decided at Marysville

Marysville, April 9—In the suit of Lewis Scheiderer, Marysville carpenter and contractor, against the Bank of Marysville, an entry has been filed in Common Pleas Court deciding the case in favor of the bank. The suit is the result of a cashier's check given to Mr. Scheiderer by Amer Gibbs, of Wapakoneta. The check was endorsed by Scheiderer and cashed by the local bank. A part of the money was returned to Gibbs, while the balance went to Scheiderer, as compensation for labor necessary in constructing a sign board for Gibbs.

When the check was presented to the Wapakoneta bank, payment was refused, whereupon the local bank withdrew $258.25, the amount of the check, from Scheiderer's checking account, which was protested in the suit.

Party Leaders Preparing For Adjournment May 17; Huge Program is Ahead

Would Send Congress Home Three Weeks in Advance of Republican National Convention at Kansas City: Democrats Willing To Abide by G. O. P. Decision

Washington, April 9—Although a monster legislative program awaits enactment, party leaders today begin preparations for adjournment of the first session of the Seventieth Congress on May 19.

This would send Congress home three weeks in advance of the Republican national convention at Kansas City. The date was fixed tentatively at the insistence of Republican leaders who held that three weeks was a very brief period in which to complete their plans for the "free-for-all" contest likely to ensue at Kansas City in the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Democratic leaders appeared willing to abide by the Republican decision. First, the minority spokesmen held that in a nominal Republican Congress, the Republican leaders should set the date of adjournment, and second, they felt an early adjournment would tend to help the Democratic cause because the Republican party would be held responsible for all legislation not enacted.

See Much Politics

The opinion prevailed that in the six weeks, remaining before the potential adjournment, politics would play a predominating role. Leaders of both parties privately expressedd the belief that little legislation of a major character would be enacted, aside from the flood control and farm relief bills. If a greater program is to be enacted, it is certain that both House and Senate will have to speed up their legislative wheels.

With six weeks of work ahead, the legislative situation is as follows:

The House: McNary-Haugen farm bill, Boulder Dam bill, Jones merchant marine, flood relief and Muscle Shoals bills on calendar. St. Lawrence waterway, Columbia River basin and Welch salary increase bills in committee. Has enacted the tax reduction, new navy and postal rate decrease bills.

See Veto Swinging

The Senate: McNary-Haugen bill under debate. Boulder Dam bill on calendar. Tax bill, new navy, postal decrease, St. Lawrence waterway and Columbia River basin bills in committee. Has enacted flood relief, Muscle Shoals and Jones merchant marine bills.

Seven major pieces of legislation appeared favored for enactment before adjournment. These are the farm relief, the flood control, the Boulder Dam bill, the tax reduction bill, the Jones merchant marine bill, the new Navy measure and the postal rate decrease bill. Their favored positions came from the fact that they have passed one branch of Congress or else appear at the tops of the legislative calendars in both branches.

With adjournment but six weeks away, however, all or any of these bills could be defeated by filibustering tactics. A presidential veto undoubtedly would kill any or all of them, and administration leaders have predicted the president will use his veto freely.

SEEK NEGRO ROBBER WHO KILLED COLUMBUS MAN

Columbus, April 9—Police and detectives today were searching for a Negro robber who killed Charles H. Dixon, 56, traveling salesman, at his home here Saturday night.

The Negro had snatched a purse from Mrs. Alvira Allen, 24, as she was walking in the street. Mrs. Allen screamed and the thief fled through a residence lot. Dixon had just stepped out on his back porch and the Negro evidently gained the impression that he would attempt to intercept his flight. The fugitive fired one shot, the bullet striking Dixon in the right eye. He died enroute to a hospital.

Pittsburgh, April 9—Depositions and the taking of testimony in the suit of the Ku Klux Klan against five former members and the counter-suit of the defendants demanding an accounting of the Klan affairs in Pennsylvania will probably continue the greater part of this week, it was thought likely as the trial opened in Federal Court here today.

Scores of witnesses from all parts of the country were here, among the best known scheduled to testify before Judge W. H. S. Thomson being Wil-

All Good Racers Possess High Degree Of Intelligence

By FRANK G MENKE

"SPEED and intelligence go hand in hand in the racing game," declares John E. Madden the most famous breeder in the history of the American turf. "I've never known an intelligent horse that didn't have unusual speed nor have I ever seen a truly fast horse that wasn't amazingly intelligent.

"The greatest horse ever foaled in America probably was Man-o-War. A million lines have been written about his marvelous speed But not much stress has been placed upon his intelligence. Yet Man-O-War was one of the smartest horses that ever lived

"A smart horse like a smart human athlete, knows not how and when to use his speed to the best advantage. He never wastes an ounce of energy at any time and always has something in reserve if any premium is put on it.

Never Needed Urging

"Man O War never needed a spur to urge him on or a jockey to restrain him so that his speed and stamina could be conserved for a whirlwind finish. Man O War knew all about that himself. All a boy rider was needed for, on Man O War's back was to supply the weight that the handicapper assigned to the great colt.

"Man O War made his own race he was smart enough to keep out of pockets. He always ran in such a position that when he elected to make his charge in the stretch he would be free to run. And in every race of his career—barring possibly one—he finished with enough stamina left to race another mile, had it been necessary.

"That one race was with John P. Grier at Aqueduct. Grier was a great horse that day—a horse running even faster than his normal speed. He hooked up with Man O War at Aqueduct and raced Man-O-War from start to finish for half a mile or more.

Saved Some Speed

"The pace was terrific. Grier put everything he got into the effort But Man-O-War was quicker, the swiftness of the last sixteenth of a mile something for the last hundred yards. That's where his intelligence was in evidence

"In the final dash to the wire, Grier cracked. He had nothing left he knew he was beaten. But Man O War, running on the energy that he had conserved to waste earlier in the race, won in a romp.

Exterminator is remembered by those who knew him best for two things—his speed and his intelligence. Here was a horse wise in a thousand ways. He hated mud. He hated the training grind. And nobody ever could fool him into the idea that he actually was in a race when he merely was working out

Exterminator Was Poor

"Through all his days Exterminator was an atrocity in his workouts. I doubt if he ever ran a workout mile in a better than 1:42. Yet put him on a track in a race and he would extend himself to win from two to four lengths in fast time.

"Exterminator knew people. He seemed to know the strength and weakness of his rivals. If he got off to a poor start he never hurried to the last sixteenth of a mile. He seemed to know that horse would catch him and that he could catch him easily.

"But if the horse in front was game and stout-hearted and had stamina, Exterminator never let get a long lead. He always kept on his toes.

"Of all the horses I've ever known Exterminator was the only one who would look around in the stretch to size up the situation.

"In the earliest days when it was noticed that while in full flight he would turn his head to one side or that, it was assumed that it was merely a whim. But eventually it became a conclusion that what he actually was doing was finding out who was who in that race. For as soon as he had taken his look around he would either run faster, if some strong finisher were near him, or he would slow up if the nearest horses were quitters.

"Colin, the unbeaten, was a wonderfully intelligent horse. So was Sysonby. Roamer was a fast horse and as knowing an animal as ever lived. I've known few smarter than old Ro... holds the time record for the K... tucky Derby, or Rosebe... greatest sprinters of all t...

"It's been that way all t... turf history. Speed and ... gence go together in a race Find a horse that has intel... to begin with and you've fo... horse that is destined to become... real race horse. BAD WEATHER STOPS FIRST BALL PRACTICE

Initial Workout for Marion Eagles' Team Slated for Next Sunday

The same weather conditions that prevented a grand parade of new spring fashions yesterday also stopped the first workout of the Marion Eagles baseball club slated for Lincoln Park.

Strong winds, muddy diamonds and snow made it impossible for players, trying for a berth on the aggregation, to display their wares.

It was announced today that the opening practice would be held next Sunday, if weather permits.

LOSE TO REDS

Home Workout Stopped by Falling Temperature and Snow

Cleveland, April 9—With the temperature hovering around 30 above and snow in the air, it was doubtful whether the Cleveland Indians would go through with a scheduled workout on their home lot here today following their arrival from Cincinnati. The Tribe dropped Sunday's exhibition game to the Reds 5-7.

Tomorrow the teams leave for Chicago, where it opens the American League season Wednesday with the White Sox.

MAKES SWIM RECORD

Mrs. Lottie Moore Schoemmel is possessor of a new record after having remained afloat in the pool at Deauville Casino at Miami Beach for 32 hours, beating the former record by one hour.

YANKS DEFEAT BROOKLYN AS TWINS SMASH HOMERS

New York, April 9—Supporters of the New York Yankees are convinced today that the home run twins, Ruth and Gehrig, have regained the ability to socK homers. They saw Babe and Buster deliver circuit clouts which beat the Brooklyn Robins yesterday, 7 to 3. Dugan of the Yanks and Max Carey of the Robins also hit for four bases.

The series, now deadlocked, will be resumed in Brooklyn today.

TOM HEENEY MUCH CHANGED MAN SINCE SIGNING WITH GENE

Former Quiet Boy Thrilling Paris with Verbal Attacks on Tunney

New York, April 9—According to confidential advices from the scene of action, Tom Heeney, the willing opponent, has been having a very enjoyable visit in Paris since the news became rampant that he had been named a Brother Tunney's man for the next public demonstration in heavyweight circles. I don't know as a matter of fact, whether Heeney still is in Paris or has returned to England but, in my general uncertainty of this point, I am not altogether different from the Parisiens themselves. They have experienced a certain amount of difficulty in seeing a great deal of the young man.

Heeney got quite a break when they told him he was to go in there for an eighth of a million and the exclusive rights to Brother Tunney's fist full of knuckles. In this case, one break led to another, for it seems that Heeney was headed for Paris when the news came. If he hadn't been very careful about it, the news might have arrived while he was on his way to East Orange.

Far From Depressed

Anyhow, the tidings in question naturally left him feeling somewhat jocular and, from what I have been able to gather, nothing has happened in Paris to alter the situation. The young man still was far from depressed when last heard from. He was disporting himself in a very chic swimming pool somewhere on or near the Champs Elysees to the accompaniment of admiring cries of "tres jolie" from the populace. Previous to that occasion, the correspondents had succeeded in running a dead heat with Mr. Heeney only at isolated and very temporary junctures. In brief, they found many difficulties at all times but Mr. Heeney very seldom.

Remarks Alter

I note with pained incredulity, too, that the tenor of Thomas' remarks have altered and for the worse. Previously, he was the soul of self-abnegation, a shrinking fellow who disliked publicity and so spoke of his art in an appealing deprecating manner.

"I'm not much of a fighter, but what of it?" he seemed to imply. And while you agreed with him on both points, you admired his finger nails and the way he did his hair or something. Anyhow, you felt that a man who talked about himself in that sotto voce manner ought to be stood back from and admired at regular intervals.

But now my faith is ravished. Thomas has chucked the charming role of modesty and is talking like a chief second. If the advices are to be believed, he has declared for "flattening Tunney" and even has promised to give every deserving candidate a shot at the title when he is champion.

ATHLETICS WIN FOURTH CONTEST FROM PHILLIES

Philadelphia, April 9—The Athletics and Phillies clash again today in the sixth and final game of the city series in which the A's have won four of the five games played, thus giving them the city championship for another year. The Yankees are coming Wednesday, however, so the game today should put the Mackmen in trim for the season's opener.

GOLFERS READ

New York, April 9—With 17 courses in 14 states designated as the sites for the sectional qualifying rounds for the United States Open Golf Championships, starting on June 11, golfers all over the country will start pointing for their respective trials this week. The finals will begin on Olympia Fields Links, at Matteson, Ill., on June 21.

CUBS WIN ANOTHER

Kansas City, Mo., April 9—It was "just another workout" for the Cubs beating the Kansas City Blues here in an Easter Day special, 13 to 4

SELECTS QUARTERS

Topeka, Kas., April 9—W. B. Taylor, noted western reinsman, has made the Kansas Free Fair track here his permanent training headquarters He formerly was located at Smithville, Mo. Taylor is busily tutoring 30 head, including the good trotters, The Ultimat, 2.07¼, and Spud McCann, 2.09¼.

SELLS MARE

Indianapolis, April 9—W. C. Brattan of New Ross, Ind., sold the fast pacing mare, Elizabeth Direct, to Edwin Mathewson of Bridgeport, Conn., for a reported price of $2,500. Elizabeth Direct will continue in the stable of the Indiana reinsman. Fred Swaim, who raced her last year.

Reason why telling you things "for your own good" is resented is because you already know those things thoroughly.

ATTA BOY, MARK!

Yankee Shortstop Spreads Easter Joy, Returning $90 to Clerk

NEW YORK, April 9—Easter happiness flopped for Helen Ballard, cashier at the Hotel Ansonia, when she checked up $90 short Saturday night. The sun grew brighter on Sunday, when a young man approached her window and said:

"I've got $90 too much money in my pocket. I believe you made an error when you cashed my check yesterday."

He was Mark Koenig, shortstop of the New York Yankees.

MEXICAN DAVIS CUP TENNIS STARS LOSE TO AMERICAN TEAM

U. S. Agregation Starts Exhibition Tour After Clean Sweep Across Border

Mexico City, Mexico, April 9—The United States Davis Cup team, with a clean sweep over the Mexican net team, left here this morning, bound for San Antonio, where they will start a series of exhibitions. Led by Capt. Bill Tilden, the Americans made their stay here a complete success by winning the final two matches of the five-match affair and eliminating the Mexicans for another year.

Johnny Hennessy, Indianapolis, and Wilmer Allison, intercollegiate star, made the invaders' triumph complete by trouncing Robert Kinsey, captain of the Mexican team, and Alfonso Unda.

The match between Kinsey and Hennessy had been looked on as the best chance of a Mexican victory, but Kinsey was soundly beaten by the young American in three straight sets, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2.

It took Allison four sets to beat Unda, 4-6, 6-3, 8-6, 7-5.

JOHNSTON HOPES TO SIGN DEMPSEY TO FIGHT RISKO

New York, April 9—Jimmy Johnston, promoter-manager, hopes to induce Jack Dempsey to return to the ring in a bout with Johnny Risko in Brooklyn some time in August or September. Johnston claims the former world's heavyweight champion has agreed to fight for him if he returns to the leather-pushing game

WEATHER STOPS GAME

Indianapolis, April 9—Cold weather kept the White Sox from playing their Easter exhibition game against the American Association Indians.

ASHLAND, KY., TEAM WINS FINAL BATTLE TO COP HIGH HONORS

National Basketball Tournament Ends at University of Chicago

Chicago, April 9—In marked contrast to the excitement of the past week when 40 prep teams from all over the United States were contesting for the interscholastic basketball championship of the nation, the campus of the University of Chicago today looked like the "Deserted Village"

The happy quintet from Ashland, Ky., who triumphed over Canton, Ill., 15 to 10, in the final game of the tourney, were given a rousing send off when they left for the Blue Grass State.

Kentucky, with its two great entries—Carr Creek and Ashland—justly deserved the rich reward

Grandforks, N. D., beat out Vienna, 27 to 25 for third place, second place of course, going to Canton, Ill.

Wheeling, W. Va., won the consolation final, defeating Naugatuck, Conn., 29 to 28.

SETS RECORD

New York, April 9—Although he broke the world's record for 20 miles in winning the Staten Island American Legion Marathon yesterday, Albert (Whitey) Michelson probably will not receive official credit for a new record because championship conditions were not met in the race. His time was 1:51:02, more than seven minutes under the record.

HOPPE UNDEFEATED

Old Master Holds Big Lead in National Cue Meet

Chicago, April 9—Willie Hoppe of New York, today remained the sole undefeated player in the national three-cushion billiard tournament here.

Hoppe went into the lead, with four victories, and no defeats when Leo Keaney of Chicago checked the winning streak of Johnny Layton of St Louis at four straight. Keaney yesterday upset Layton, 50 to 17, in 61 innings

Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, defending champion, suffered his second defeat of the tourney when Gus Copulos of Detroit handed him a secure drubbing in 46 innings. The score was 50 to 26.

Art Tourniblad of Chicago was Hoppe's fourth victim. It took the old master 60 innings to turn the trick and the score was 50 to 33. In the other match of the day, Earl Lookabaugh defeated Cowboy Weston, 50 to 37, in 64 innings

TEAM TO MEET

New York, April 9—The Chicago Bricklayers and the New York Nationals will clash at Chicago next Sunday to decide the winner of the National Challenge Cup and the open soccer championship of America.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 9 —The government crop report is due tomorrow. The grain trade awaits it, with considerable anxiety, eager to know whether it will confirm recent private reports that have given a decidedly bullish aspect to the wheat situation in this country.

Any continued return to cold weather after the rainfall in the winter wheat belt last week might add to the damage already supposed to have been done to the growing crop. A freeze, catching the soil in a soaked condition, could do a lot of harm.

Wheat eased off last week after a demonstration of strength, but on Saturday the market shook off its appearance of weakness and displayed what was diagnosed as a persistent upward tendency.

The May future established its premium over the deferred deliveries once more. The shakeout in the middle of the week appeared to have put the whole market in a healthier technical condition.

Private messages from various sections in the wheat area east of the Missisippi continued to reach the Board of Trade with woeful tales of damage. The market did not respond to these in a consistent manner. Uneasy longs were shifty in their market positions.

Reasonably good export business was reported on the breaks. The course of domestic price, however, is believed to depend more on the damage to the Winter wheat and on planting conditions of the Spring crop than anything else.

Corn underwent a decided decline during the week. Liquidation of tired longs was the only apparent reason for it. Supply and demand conditions do not appear to have changed in a way to warrant any continued downward market.

Herbert Blum, one of the leading corn bulls, was credited during the week with letting go of some of his holdings. Probably he did, but his attitude is, I think, still bullish for the long pull.

Blame on Corn

He told me that Chicago cannot get much more corn from points in Illinois, but is likely still to get some from Missouri River markets.

Stocks in Chicago are big, but in his opinion the opening of lake navigation will drain corn out of this market with great rapidity.

Elevators have not begun changing over hedges in the May future into a more deferred month. It may take a bigger discount to make such changing to look attractive to them. If longs in the May future really want the corn their contracts call for, the market may work into a very tight position next month.

Weather An Influence

The weather will have a good deal to do with the situation. At present it seems to be taken for granted that we shall have a good spring and eventually a big corn crop. That is counting chickens a long way in advance.

The break in oats came as something of a surprise. But that market attracts a trade so small comparatively that when the future market gets overbought as it had been for a long time, it can sell off quite irrespective of strength in the cash situation.

Rye was the one grain that continued to act up to specifications of what the situation is at home and abroad. Foreign messages announced that the European continent is short of rye and will have to depend largely on importations from this country until the last of July.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Markets were quiet this morning with dealers replenishing their stocks following unusually heavy buying Saturday. Prices were, in the main, unchanged from last week. Old potatoes are high. Red River varieties were selling this morning at 60 and 65 cents, other varieties were being quoted at 45 cents. In spite of a large supply, the price continues to advance slowly. New potatoes are playing in the part in the potato market, as yet. The supply is limited and the price this morning was quoted at 10 cents a pound. No marked change in old potatoes is looked for by dealers until after planting has started.

New vegetables, aside from potatoes, are plentiful. New cabbage is selling at five cents. Old cabbage, however, is appealing the bulk of the demand, at two cents. Egg plant is supplying a limited demand at 20 and 25 cents. Peas and green beans were selling today at 30 cents a pound. Asparagus and new beets are supplying a limited demand at two bunches for 25 cents. Green onions were being quoted today at 10 cents a bunch.

No Unusual Berry Supply

The anticipated flood of strawberries predicted by dealers Friday failed to materialize Saturday and prices were only slightly cheaper than early in the week. Some Louisiana berries were selling at 55 cents a quart. Oranges are becoming slightly scarcer. A few of the smaller varieties were being offered at 14 for 25 cents while larger varieties were selling at from 25 to 65 cents a dozen.

Retail meat prices were steady with dealers reporting buying about normal.

AVERAGE WOMAN SPENDS 6,000 HOURS AT MIRROR

Stockholm—A Swedish statistician has recently calculated that the average woman of seventy years spends about six thousand hours of her life before the mirror, a total of twenty minutes per day.

By attentive and consecutive observations he established the gradual decrease in the number of these hours as the woman grows older.

A French journalist, commenting upon the figures, says that there is nothing more for him to do now but calculate the number of hours the average man of seventy has spent in front of the mirrors of cafes.

60 MASONS ATTEND EASTER DAY SERVICE

Annual Knights Templar Event Takes Place in Presbyterian Church

Sixty Knights Templar formed in line to march from the Masonic Temple to the First Presbyterian Church, where the lodge held its annual Easter observance services.

Sermons for the services were delivered by Rev. James Fisher, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Howard L. Chandler, pastor of the church in which the services were held.

The services opened with an organ prelude "A Spring Song," played by Mrs. Harry Williams. Congregational singing of the hymn "Onward Christian Soldier" followed. "Easter Morn" was used as the anthem. The congregation and Knights Templars read responsively from Psalm XXIV, 1-2.

A solo, "The First Easter Morn," was sung by Miss Ruth B. Henderson.

Reverend Fisher took for his sermon topic "As Far As To Bethany," and Reverend Chandler spoke from "Christ and Immortality."

The services closed with an organ postlude "Hallelujah Chorus," played by Mrs. Harry Williams.
